The First Amendment prohibits the government from censoring or banning:

- Art
- TV shows
- Tattoos
- Church services
- Movies
- Web pages
- Protests
- Books
- Petition drives
- Newspapers

The U.S. Supreme Court said that if a newspaper is denied the right to use news-racks to distribute papers, it is denied its First Amendment right to publish (Lakewood v. Plain Dealer, 1988).

Don't let local governments silence newspapers by restricting their distribution.
